National Center for Advanced Studies Humanities and Social Sciences (NCAS)

The NCAS is home for research and intellectual interaction. It promotes reflective thinking, innovative ideas, creativity and originality among academics.

The NCAS is a national Centre in Sri Lanka set up by an Ordinance in October 2005 under Section 24A of the Universities Act No. 16 of 1978 for the purpose of promoting advanced studies and research mainly in the fields of Humanities and Social Sciences.

The Centre was set up after a few years of discussion and study at the University Grants Commission (UGC), initiated by several senior professors in the relevant fields, to address the needs and requirements of human resources development, advanced research studies and academic publications in humanities and social sciences as well as related fields. It was strongly felt that the state of academic contributions in social sciences and related fields compared to natural sciences including medicine, is lagging behind or not making the required contribution as they did in earlier times due to several perhaps unavoidable reasons.

A major root cause identified was the lack of opportunities for the increasing number of young academics in the ever expanding university system to undertake postgraduate studies and doctoral research. Foreign scholarships were hard to come by. Therefore, an initial task of the NCAS was to offer financial grants through government funding to academics to pursue their MPhils and PhDs at local and foreign universities. So far, 494 academics have availed themselves of this opportunity; 303 have completed their studies. The NCAS has selected 11 grantees for 2019, and they intend to undertake studies in local and foreign universities.
