Being one of the major stake holders of the studies in the disciplines of Arts, Humanities, Social Sciences, Education, Law and Management, I am sure that the NCAS

Having its Symposium theme “Advancing Humanities and Social Sciences Research for National Development,” the NCAS showcases its responsibility and the thrive towards new approaches, encouraging the academia and the governing bodies of this country to seek amalgamating the needs and demands of the society and cater for the multitude, having a fish-eye approach. Hence, there is an urgent imperative to advance research in humanities and social sciences for national development. I have the fullest confidence that the 6th International Research Symposium on Social Sciences and Humanities (IRSSSH) 2024 endeavors to explore such intersections of technology that could invigorate and expand studies in humanities and social sciences establishing feasible modalities for national development.

I congratulate all those involved in organizing this impactful event, and I extend my best wishes to NCAS for its future initiatives and collaborations to enhance the quality of work and quality of life of our own society!
